

MOKENA OPENS WAR ON SPEEDERS

Protest To Village Board Results In Plan For Drastic Measures

For sometime Mokena has been troubled with careless auto drivers. Most of the speeders are from Mokena and immediate territory. They have a habit of disregarding all safety precautions and use the streets for speedways.

As a result of this condition and an ever increasing wave of reckless driving, the lives and limbs of little children and older persons are being greatly endangered and the matter finally came to a boiling point Wednesday night when wrathful citizens appealed to the village board to stop this menace before some one is killed or injured.

Following a vigorous appeal to the board to take this matter in hand, the board has ordered speed limit and stop signs which will be placed at various street intersections in the village.

In addition the board is issuing a warning that if any automobile drivers violate these precautions they will be arrested and brought before the local police magistrate regardless of who they are. In addition to this the board has secured the names of a number of the local speed artists and the village clerk has written a letter to the parents of each of these boys pointing out the danger in which these lads place themselves and others by their disregard for safety. The names of the offenders will be held now, but if they persist in being reckless, their names will be published so the public can watch out for them.

Another factor brought out was that small children are allowed to drive trucks and cars regardless of the fact that in an emergency these children would be helpless. An illustration of this occurred Tuesday when a small boy driving a car at a rather fast clip attempted to turn off Front street to cross the Rock Island tracks at the depot crossing. He almost lost control of the car which began to swerve sideways until the hind wheels were off the crossing plank and against the rails.

The Mokena village board wants it plainly understood that it is not in a joking mood but means what it says and regardless whose feelings are hurt, arrests will be made and fines assessed if there are any more violations and all such court proceedings together with the names of those involved will be published.

Mokena May Invoke Curfew

The Mokena village board has been asked to invoke the curfew law as a result of many little children being out on the streets at all hours of the night, some even up to 11 and midnight. A number of cases of theft have occurred and destruction of property. Citizens have appealed to the village board for action in this matter, so the board has decided that if parents are not capable of keeping their children off the streets at night, the curfew law will be invoked. The fire siren will be blown at 9 o'clock and after that hour by the village officials will be subject to pickup by the local authorities.

Parents should exercise enough discipline over their children so it would not be necessary for the village officials to take such action, according to the opinions of law-abiding citizens.

JUDGE WILSON OFFERS AID IN GAMBLING WAR

Will County officials from State's Attorney James E. Burke, Sheriff Michael Breen to Circuit Judge Edwin L. Wilson have declared war on slot machines in the county. Monday was set by State's Attorney Burke on which slot machines were to quit operations. He had ordered all these machines to not only cease operations, but also that they be removed entirely from taverns and other places operating them.

Judge Wilson promises grand jury action in the following statement made by him in backing up the action of State's Attorney Burke:

"The State's Attorney of Will County announced through the press last week all gambling machines, commonly known as slot machines, would be forced to discontinue operation in this County. If his warning has been effective, and I do not doubt it has been, no such devices are now operating in Will County.

"The action taken by the State's Attorney and the Sheriff has my full approval and that of the other judges of the Circuit Court of this District.

"The primary duty of the judges of the Circuit Court, as of all other judges, is to pass on such matters as are brought before them and the Court has no police force attached to it to conduct investigations. Nevertheless, the Circuit Court is the highest law enforcement agency of the County and if at any time conditions warrant such action I shall not hesitate to order a special Grand Jury to investigate such violations of the laws of the State concerning gambling as are alleged, and in this connection I ask the co-operation of the law-abiding citizens of Will County.

"EDWIN L. WILSON, Judge of the Circuit Court, Twelfth Judicial District."

The residents of the eastern part of Will County, however, are viewing these moves with a skeptical mind, feeling that the heat is on now but after a few weeks or months, the machines will be in full operation again. Public officials in the past have made so many unfulfilled promises that the public does not take much stock in their promises.

However, if the present Will County officials back of this latest drive, to keep the slot machines out of the county, mean what they say and back up their statements with concerted action, the public will also back them up and will appreciate their good work.

If on the other hand these officials fail to keep their promises, they will incur the wrath and displeasure of the public and will stand a good chance of being defeated if they come up for a public office again.

Hern Pitches No-Hit No-Run Game

Richard Hearn, 21 year old right-hander from Chicago, son of an accountant in the county treasurer's office, and a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hensel of Mokena, last Sunday night, pitched a no-hit, no-run game at Eldorado, Ark., to give Eldorado an 11-0 win over Greenville in the Cotton States League.

Hearn, who struck out six, was in trouble twice as a result of eight walks he allowed. He succeeded in retiring the visitors in the 8th with 3 men on bases and whiffed a pinch hitter in the 9th with two on.

He visited in Mokena a few months ago before going into training in the Eldorado camp.

Survey New Super Highway Route Thru Frankfort

Surveyors have been working thru Frankfort the past several weeks surveying for a right of way for a super four lane highway to be built along the Indian boundary line thru to Kankakee and southwest to Texas. It is understood that the proposed route is to be a federal project and that the pavement is to start at Blue Island and run southwestward to Texas. The proposed route as surveyed would touch the east edge of Frankfort along the old railroad right-of-way surveyed thru here in the early 70's. It would run along the outskirts of Manhattan. According to rumors the contract for the construction of this new highway is to be let in July. So far no land has been purchased or easements procured thru this section.

Last Thursday morning two Palos Park youths, James Barnes and Edw. Frocke, both 20 years of age, were sentenced from one to ten years in the Joliet penitentiary on arson charges in the Cook County Criminal Court in the court of Judge Herrington. The boys had confessed to setting numerous prairie fires in Palos, also to burning down a vacant house and firing a coal yard.

The lads were arrested by officers from the State Fire Marshall's office. They made a 16 page confession.

Ruffy Silverstein the Illinois state heavy weight champion wrestler three times National Amateur Champion will appear in the Chamber of Commerce Building Thursday night May 12 at Walter Shaugnessy's weekly professional wrestling show. Silverstein has made one appearance here before and pleased the crowd so that he comes back by popular demand. The Jewish boy is the latest sensation in the mat world and it is predicted that he will not stop until he reaches the top spot in the heavyweight ranks. Silverstein has everything needed to make a champion. He has science, strength, and is a very quick thinker. Although Ruffy has become a very popular athlete since turning professional he has not forgotten the youngsters who are trying to get somewhere. Ruffy devotes three nights a week to teaching youngsters at the Chicago Jewish federation how to swim and other athletics. Silverstein weighs about 195 lbs. when at his peak, and since embarking into the professional wrestling ranks has thrown such heavyweights as Fredreich Von Schacht, Jim McMillen and 235 lb. Irishman who is recognized by New York State as the World's champion, Steve Crusher Casey. Silverstein's opponent has not been chosen as yet, but it is possible it will either be Bad Boy Brown, the meanest man in wrestling, Rudy Strongberg, or Rudy Kay.

There will be two more bouts on the card and two hours of the best wrestling that can be provided is promised. The first bout starts at 8:15 p.m. at the Chamber of Commerce Building in downtown Joliet Thursday eve May 12.

Too Much Speed, Auto Hits Tail End of Truck

Too much speed caused a serious accident on 159th street near Keane avenue Tuesday morning about 11 o'clock. A car driven by a resident of Evanston whose name was not learned, crashed into the rear of a truck which was turning into a lane off the north side of 159 street. The driver of the car applied the hydraulic brakes at the intersection of Keane and 159th, sliding his wheels for nearly 100 feet but was unable to stop or swerve the car around the truck. In the crash the windshield shattered showering the broken glass over the driver's wife. She sustained painful cuts on the nose and face. She was removed to the Oak Forest Infirmary hospital for treatment and later was taken to her home in Evanston.

The front end of the car was completely wrecked. It was towed to Evanston by an auto wrecking concern from that city.

The auto driver escaped injury as also did the truck driver. The truck was only slightly damaged. Mrs. Ray Brennan witnessed the crash.

Bandit Story Fails To Hold Up But Cupid Wins Out

George Pearce of 510 N. Briggs street, Joliet, began his wedding day last Saturday with two troubles. One was his conscience and the other was the bandage on his nose, which involved some explanation to Susan Melleda, his bride-to-be, a 19 year old brunette from New Lenox.

Putting aside the photographic impossibilities of adhesive, Susan said she would go through with the marriage in Harvey Saturday as they had planned it. She thought George a hero as he related how bandits stopped his car in Joliet last Friday night, and took $40 from his wedding cache and slugged him on the nose with a gun butt. They left him $50, and while that would enforce economies on their celebration, the sum would be sufficient, she thought.

But Joliet's policemen are jealous of the reputation of their city of prisons, championship bands and wallpaper. They were inquisitive enough, when George reported the holdup, to pry the plaster from his face. This made them skeptical, for George's nose was in its original state.

Saturday George told the rest of the story. He promised Susan, he related, that he would have $100 when they faced the Rev. John Shimmel in Harvey. Came Friday night and there was only $50—a time for emergency action and a faked robbery. Once the records were straight, the Joliet police said they were not much interested in the holdup story any more.

The couple were married in Harvey Saturday night.

HEALTH OFFICER STRONG ADVOCATE OF IMMUNIZATION

Dr. A. J. Levy of the State Board of Health gave an educational and highly informative talk at the health meeting held Tuesday evening at the Mokena public school.

He said that infectious diseases can be checked from becoming an epidemic by immediately putting the patient to bed and keeping him isolated. By keeping strict watch in the early stages of any infectious disease its spread can be promptly checked. He further pointed out that a child having a slight attack of scarlet fever can still be a carrier for 28 days.

In case of small children Dr. Levy advocated that toys should be washed with soap, water and lysol. Further, he favored scrubbing the woodwork, etc., of a sick room with soap, water and lysol in place of fumigation. Bed sheets, pillows, etc., should be boiled before sending to a laundry.

Dr. Levy strongly stressed immunization as a disease preventative, and advised that all three "shots" of the treatment should be taken so as to make the treatment most effective. The talks were illustrated with moving pictures. Dr. Levy answered many questions. It is probable he will speak here before a future meeting of the Mokena PTA. Dr. E. G. MacMahon was chairman of the meeting Tuesday night.

FROM PEN to PLATTER

Forty-five million pounds of steaks, chops, roasts and stews are consumed daily in the United States, the product of five and one-half million farms which now hold 133 million head of cattle, hogs and sheep. So immense is the industry that 24 cents of every farm dollar comes from livestock sale, and 29 million people are employed in the work. From western ranges like that at the right, thousands of carloads of beef are moved each fall to corn belt feedlots (below) to be finished for market. From 13 corn belt states comes 60 per cent of all our beef and much of the feed used in livestock production. Following is a bird's-eye view of the livestock and meat industry.

FOTO-FEATURE

Efficient production methods are responsible for "ton litters" of pigs (below) and blue ribbon lambs (right). Expositions and fairs have done much to improve livestock breeding and growing.

Sponsored by organizations like the National Livestock and Meat Board are research activities to improve meat's quality and palatability. Below are shown tests for tenderness and cooking methods.

Another factor in better meat production is 4-H club work by farm youths, a bigger item than most people realize.

The above map shows where our meat is produced. Two-thirds of it is consumed in states east of the Mississippi river.

Livestock shipping is important, for animals must be protected. Trucks join the railroads in this work today, and a steady stream of grunting, baa-ing loads reach terminals daily.

In the old days stockmen accompanied their animals to market. Now railroads work with commission firms which handle the entire transaction. An average car carries 25 cattle, 80 hogs or 250 lambs, the latter loaded in double-deck fashion.

In 1,100 American packing houses inspectors watch over meat as it goes through the plant and on to the retail market.

At 160,000 retail shops American housewives can now buy a different meat cut every day for at least four months, because the modern market caters to women who want variety in their menu. Right: The "finished product" of a nation-wide industry.

Efficiency in livestock trading is equalled only by the packing house's efficiency in dressing its meat. Above is a typical scene where buyer and seller transact their business verbally, never in writing until some time later. A significant feature of these transactions is that all animals are paid for in cash and the check in settlement is tendered on the day of the sale.

Soon thereafter, the livestock will be on its way through the packing house. From the time it is dressed, meat is kept under constant refrigeration, going through processing until it appears in wholesale cuts, fresh from the cutting department and ready for the retail trade.

This is the final chapter in the story of another industry where the modern giant, Research, has been of untold importance in improving the product. Yesterday's tough steak, thanks to science, is only a nightmare.

Men of the Mounted

WHEN SITTING BULL REALLY SAT DOWN

TO VIOLATE an age-old Sioux law, and to do so in the presence of a few hundred Sioux warriors whose weapons still glistened with the white blood of the Custer massacre, to do such an unheard of thing and get away alive, such was the distinction that came, rather suddenly, to one of the smallest men ever seen in the ranks of the Mounted. The "untouchables" of India had little on the old-time Indian medicine men, when it came to keeping fellow humans at a distance, and one of the most famous of "untouchables" among American Indians was Sitting Bull, medicine man and mad magician of the hard-fighting Sioux.

After the frightful butchery at Little Big Horn, the Sioux knew that if they stayed where they were they would soon have thousands of American soldiers on their necks, men who would wreak the fullest measure of revenge for the terrific slaughter of Custer's brave troops. It was a case of fight, or fly, so after much debate and wrangling, the Sioux decided to fly to Canada, to Manitoba, and seek sanctuary under the British flag until the excitement over the Custer affair had died down. Six thousand Sioux and a few hundred Nez Percés took refuge on Canadian soil, and the Northwest Mounted Police began to be a bit curious about the newcomers, so an inspector and ten men were dispatched to contact the Sioux and find out what they intended to do in regards to the future, whether they intended to stay in Canada and become "wards," or if they planned raids and depredations against the white settlers in Canada.

After much peace-piping and parleying Sitting Bull, the spokesman, assured the police inspector that the Sioux were on a peaceful mission and that after a breathing spell they would probably return to the United States. Satisfied, the inspector and his men returned to quarters.

The Sioux settled down to the more or less uneven tenor of their semi-savage ways.

Things went along quietly until some of the braves grew restless and staged a horse-stealing foray. This was mistake number one. Mistake number two was that they had been foolish enough to steal some of the best horses from the Northwest Mounted Police, and among these was Inspector Allen's favorite mount. This was, as Allen put it, "a bit too thick," so with two men he returned to the Sioux and demanded that all the stolen horses be at once brought to him. Sitting Bull shouted and waved a few times, and soon some of the stolen horses were led up to the Men of the Mounted.

"Where's the rest of them?" queried the inspector, quietly.

"Find 'em yourself," said several Sioux simultaneously. As time passed other horses were found and the Men of the Mounted were feeling quite lucky, except for the fact that the inspector's horse had not been found. Then came a moment when Inspector Allen saw his horse, and its rider was Sitting Bull himself. Giving the sign of friendship, Inspector Allen, head and shoulders shorter than any Sioux brave around him, and probably half the size of Sitting Bull, pointed to the black mare, and said:

"My horse. You must give it back . . . to me."

"My horse . . . Pony Soldier," shouted Sitting Bull.

"That horse carries my brand, my mark," said Allen, softly as he moved close enough to have Sitting Bull's left knee come under his clean-shaven chin.

"My horse!" screamed Sitting Bull. At this hundreds of Sioux warriors, sensing trouble, closed in on the quarrelling pair. Allen stood his ground, however. Again he parleyed with Sitting Bull, and again received a flood of abuse and insolence and a threat of sudden death.

It was then that Inspector Allen violated a Sioux law as old as the Sioux, the law that decreed sudden death to anyone offering or committing violence upon the sacred personage of a tribal medicine man. Bracing himself, and reaching upward, Inspector Allen caught firm hold of Sitting Bull, yanked him out of the saddle, and landed him squarely on his sacred sit-down. As a tremendous and deafening uproar broke out, and several braves made dangerous passes at Allen, the latter vaulted swiftly into his saddle. Without showing any of the nervousness that he certainly must have felt, Inspector Allen sat at stiff attention for a minute or two, then nudged his horse and guided it deftly through the pack of howling Indians. Fifteen minutes later, with all but a few of the stolen horses herded for the trip back to quarters, the inspector and his two men rode quietly out of the Sioux encampment. Allen carried with him the distinction of being the only white man ever to man-handle the great and sacred Sitting Bull, and live to tell about it.

YOUR CHURCH

Of all the institutions that minister to the general welfare, your church is probably the only one that depends entirely upon you for its growth and support. The agencies that protect your life and property have behind them all the power of government. Training for the mind and healing for the body are provided in schools and hospitals, and every citizen shares in their maintenance. Your church, however ever stands alone. It functions or ceases to function according to those who belong to it, or who should belong to it, uphold its teaching and its work.

Yet it ministers to something quite as important as life, health, or property. It serves the spiritual and moral needs of your community. Its teachings are the most potent influence for good that exists. It does more to make your town a good place to live in than any other institution. It can do more to make your own life broader, more whole some and worthwhile. Surely you owe it, to yourself and to others, to support your church, to attend its services and take an active interest in its affairs.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Everlasting Punishment" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 1.

The Golden Text was, "Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God; and not that he should return from his ways, and live?" (Ezek. 18:23).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby" (Hebrews 12:11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man's wisdom finds no satisfaction in sin, since God has sentenced sin to suffer. Through the whole some chastisements of Love, we are helped onward in the march towards righteousness, peace, and purity, which are the landmarks of Science" (p. 322-323).

THINGS ONE REMEMBERS

By R. M. Hofer.

The Bonneville hydro-electric development on the Columbia River, is the second egg to be hatched in the government's power socialization incubator.

As one listened to the stories its promoters told of the blessings it would bring to the Northwest, one almost became hypnotized with the thought that this great section of the United States had never seen electric lights. Then when the spell binding ended one suddenly remembered there had been electric lights and power in the Northwest territory ever since one could remember, and that strange as it may seem, Bonneville could be washed out completely and not a wheel would stop turning or a light stop burning in all the country tributary to it.

The people of seven counties in Oregon were asked at a recent special election to vote for a tax-exempt power district to use tax-exempt Bonneville power, in competition with the power service they already enjoy from highly-taxed private companies, which taxes help support their schools, roads and all public activity, including paying for Bonneville.

Petty thieves have visited Mr. McGovney's place quite often for some reason or other.

Here's Why GAS Refrigeration Saves You Money Year After Year

● Electrolux, the gas refrigerator, saves because it's different. The little freezing mechanism which makes cold with the tiny blue "thrift flame" is the only freezing mechanism which has no moving parts. No moving parts means no parts to wear—giving you longer life for your refrigerator . . . and low upkeep cost, for there are no expensive replacements. It also costs less to operate, because efficiency is held at the same high level, allowing the "thrift flame" to scrimp on fuel, year after year. Then, too, you get permanent silence—parts that do not move, do not make a noise.

See this beautiful new Electrolux today!

Come in and see the refrigerator that saves—marked at a lower price than ever before—with a generous trade-in allowance and more sensational new convenience features. SYNOPSIS

Sarah Lynn Dana, youngest of the Dana women of Danavale, Calif., chafes at the well-ordered life approved by her mother, Adelaide, who is trying to marry her to Duncan Van Doren, Detroit society youth. Great-granny Dana, covered-wagon pioneer, and community matriarch, recognizes in the girl the restless adventurousness of the "dark Danas," a trait shared by her and Cousin Sally Ann Dana, traveler and author, and pleads with Sally Ann to take the girl abroad. Uncle Lynn, wheelchair invalid, adds his plea to Sally Ann to save Sarah Lynn, as does the girl's young brother, Bill. Another plea comes from Miss Pennington, "Penny," adoring governess of the girl, saying she is unhappy and misunderstood. At a family dinner party, Sally Ann first hears of Keaton Dana's ultra-modern wife, Ardine, who runs a roadhouse called the Stewed Prune, and is trying to wangle a fight with Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, famous for his refusal to fly women, through their mutual friend, Jim Allison. Gunnar Thorwald arrives with Jim Allison, and Sarah Lynn is attracted to him. Duncan invites her to the Stewed Prune. Sarah Lynn refuses to drink anything but ginger ale. Cousin Mary Dana Webster tells Sarah she suspects Ardine and her friends of framing on Gunnar, and Sarah Lynn, in an increasing stupor, decides to warn him. When Gunnar arrives, angry at Jim Allison for missing connections, he hears Sarah Lynn cry, "Go away! Don't come in! Ladybug, fly away home," and sees her carried out to the ladies' room, unconscious. Gunnar arrives at the airport. Sarah Lynn, partly out of her stupor, imagines the sensations of flying, with Gunnar at the controls. Gunnar, flying to Los Angeles, senses someone standing behind him. When he realizes it is Sarah Lynn, he shouts, "Keep away from me, drunken fool!" will listen to no explanation, and detours to Fresno. Thrown out at Fresno "like a sack of mail," Sarah Lynn is greeted by a group headed by a bride and groom, who recognize Gunnar. While the "bride" drives Sarah Lynn to the hotel to await her father, one of the party phones the story to the newspapers, identifying the two fliers, and the "bride" as Kitty Medill, wild stunt flier.

Sarah Lynn felt that Mrs. Pond understood even more perfectly. She was equally hospitable, but her shrewd, bright eyes were evaluating the frowsy hair, the bedraggled dress, the blanket. "I'll make you a cup of chocolate, as you must have a good hot tub."

"And a sound sleep," her husband added. "Your father can't make it under four hours, so you must just relax and be comfortable."

Danavale rang and rocked with Sarah Lynn's exploit. Mary Dana Webster went at once to the parents and stated her firm conviction that the child had been drugged, but Ardine slid out of their questionings like quicksilver.

The nonagenarian summoned Sarah Lynn. "Your Great-grammer wants you should come over, quick's ever you can get here," the flat tones of Emma Waters, the maid, stated over the telephone.

The girl set out at once, the greyhound flashing on ahead. Lightning was a solace in the first few vocal days of Danavale's disappearance.

The matriarch was chirping and cackling with excitement and approval. "Well, I declare, Sairy Lynn, if you didn't up'n put out same's I did! Cawled into the flyin' machine and hid just like I did in the covered wagon! Don't surprise me a mite! Proud of you. And I'd admire to meet your beau sometime. You fetch him over to see me, Sarah Lynn."

Her great-granddaughter cringed. "Great-granny, he isn't at all! He despises me. You don't understand. He is furious because—"

"Oh, well, now, don't you fret!" the ancestress comforted her. "Your Great-grammer was kind of like that, first off. Some are. Thought they'd ought of sent me back and was real harsh in his talk, but land—he come round in no time. You'll see!"

Sarah Lynn went upstairs where her Cousin Sally Ann was having tea with her Uncle Lynn. They were the most satisfactory of all her adherents.

"After all, it was a gorgeous adventure," the traveling clanswoman said. "At your age I'd have adored it."

"I did," Sarah Lynn said quickly. "I do. Only—the way it happened—"

Lynn Dana said, "I've just remembered a chap I know rather well, an airman, Conrad Jordan. He's undoubtedly met this Gunnar lad, or he will, and I intend to see, Sarah Lynn, that he gets the truth."

She flushed hotly. "Oh, that's good of you, Uncle Lynn, but you mustn't bother. It wouldn't make a bit of difference to him. I mean—he has such contempt for—everybody mixed up with it—"

"When you come abroad with me we'll do a lot of flying, Sarah Lynn," the older woman said. "I like it enormously. The glamour never goes out of it for me."

They were casual, comfortable; Sarah Lynn stayed on and on, listening while they talked to each other. She walked home in the dusk with her greyhound pacing demurely beside her.

She found the old governess reading ardently, with four library books opened about her.

"I'm just refreshing my mind a bit on Norse history and legend, my dear," she greeted her charge, lifting pale, protuberant eyes. "I was rather rusty, so to speak. Quite marvelous people, the Norsemen."

The Vikings, voyaging all about Europe, conquering, learning, amazing. Women and children went along to the wars, you know. Valiant, but hard, they were. Listen to this bit!"—she lifted a worn volume of history—"The early Norseman had a keen mind, but his heart was as much steel as his sword; he loved battle and stormy seas; he admired the brave, the clever, the strong; for the old and feeble he had no interest, for the suffering no sympathy; the weak he despised."

"Yes," said Sarah Lynn. "I know."

Sarah Lynn liked Europe—Sally Ann's Europe, and Sally Ann's Europe liked Sarah Lynn. She sat in silence for the most part, looking and listening ardently, and presently people began to notice her, clad to type for the first time in her life, and to speak pleasantly to her, and after a while she was answering with confidence.

One day in Paris Sally Ann hooded her typewriter and said, "Let's fly somewhere, shall we?"

She let Sarah Lynn savor the timetables first—"Imperial Airways"—"Suddesutsche Lufthansa"—She read avidly—"Baggage—Refreshments—Noise—Air-sickness"—enchanted to learn that a fourprank." She was painstakingly fitting purple carbon between her crisp pages and kept her eyes on her work. "Nice to have it cleared up, isn't it?"

"Yes," her young cousin said.

Sarah Lynn went out of doors and looked up at the sky. She would never see Gunnar Thorwald again, but when she came into his mind—not of her own importance, but because she was the symbol of his rage—he would not say, "Keep away from me, drunken fool!" He would say, "Poor thing!" But would he? She remembered every word of the old governess' historical excerpts: "His heart was so much steel as his sword; for the suffering he had no sympathy; the weak he despised." But at least it would be a somewhat different quality of contempt.

Sally Ann took her gaily to Salzburg where a friend was singing in the "Rosenkavalier" and left her there for a blissful week, and told her she might fly back to Paris by herself. Sarah Lynn would always remember that long day's flight as her actual initiation to the air. The through plane was booked solid, and she was elated to have to change three times and to do it alone.

Sarah Lynn talked excitedly to Sally Ann about her long day's

The plain cousin sighed. "Well, at any rate, she's got Sarah Lynn back again."

"Ah, but has she? Geographical, yes; psychologically, no! Something's happened to the child, Mary. A sea change—no, air! Mary, I'm telling you! The last of the queer, dark Dana girls has found her element."

"You mean she'll actually be a flier? Have her own plane?" She shook her head. "Cousin Adelaide won't listen to the idea, and can you imagine Ed Dana going against her?"

"Ah, but reinforcements are rapidly galloping to the rescue, headed by Great-granny, tailed by the dashing and heroic figure now before you."

"Lynn! You're going to finance her?"

He nodded. "Yes. But not a word to anyone."

Gunnar Thorwald came to meet Sarah Lynn. He spoke at once, without greeting or prelude, "I ask you to pardon."

Sarah Lynn stood still, staring at him.

He took off his helmet and absurdly she recalled Kitty Medill's high, sweet voice in the dim-lit lobby of the Hotel Californian at Fresno—"You tell your big Swede I don't like his fireman's hat!" His hair was the guileless yellow of unsalted butter, and he had a lean, stern, young face and ice-blue eyes. Their grave gaze was steady upon her. He said again, "I ask you to pardon. I know now the truth. I have shame of my rough words."

She bent her head. "Thank you," she said uneventfully.

He put his quaint head-gear on again and continued to regard her seriously. "You like to fly?"

Color came flooding back into her face. "Oh, better than anything else in the world!"

"Now? You will come?"

He was asking her to fly with him. Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, who never flew women, who had scorned and despised her, was asking her to go up in his plane. She heard herself making a vague sound and she saw that it must have seemed like acceptance because the tall youth nodded.

"So! We go to tell them." He turned into the little dooryard with its cinnamon pinks and candytuft and China asters and stood aside for her to precede him through the narrow door, up the precipitous stair. Gunnar Thorwald in the first little old Dana house with the matriarch and the man in the wheelchair, and a stranger, and Jens serving tea with heavy care, his huge shoes creaking as always.

She sat silent in her dress and cloak and beret the color of ancient brick and Lynn Dana's eyes were warm upon her.

The Norseman put down his cup and rose. "We fly," he stated briefly.

The stranger, who was Conrad Jordan, stood up, too. "I'll drive you out to the field," he said.

"I'll telephone your mother, Sarah Lynn," her uncle said.

"Oh, but not until after I've gone!" she cried out in panic.

The nonagenarian gave her shrill cackle. "You just up'n put out, Sairy Lynn, quick's ever you can," she chuckled. "If there's any to do about it, you tell 'em your great-grammer said you could!"

Sarah Lynn sat beside Conrad Jordan in the small, swift car, and the Norwegian ace doubled up his length in the rumble-seat. They had telephoned from Danavale and the Hermod was being warmed up when they arrived, and she saw Gunnar Thorwald walk round it once, twice, and again, in eagle-eyed inspection, before he took his place.

Quick Embroidery for a Luncheon Set

HERE an embroidered border is plainly shown. No pattern is necessary. Book offered herewith contains other interesting borders of this type. Space your stitches just as they are here. The embroidery should be done in a light and a dark color. Use all strands of six-strand mercerized embroidery thread. Color suggestions are—dark and lighter blue thread on white material—dark green and light yellow on light green material—black and bright blue on pale yellow—deep rose and brown on pale pink.

Baste ½-inch deep hems around both mats and napkins. Working from right side with double thread, make two rows of running stitches in the dark color, as at A, catching through the hem. Thread a blunt tapestry needle with the light thread and weave through the running stitches keeping needle pointed to the left as at B. Next, weave back again, as at C, still pointing the needle to the left.

Readers who have received their copy of Mrs. Spears' book on Sewing, for the Home Decorator, will be pleased to know that Book No. 2 is now ready. Ninety embroidery stitches; fabric repair-

AROUND THE HOUSE

Grease the Paper.—Grease both the pan and paper when lining cake pans.

Hanging New Curtains.—Baste a tack in new curtains under the top hem where it will not show, then if the curtains shrink when first laundered it will be easy to let out the extra length.

Washing a Raincoat.—Soap should never be used when washing a raincoat. Instead, use a solution of one pound of alum to three gallons of water.

Butter the Raisins.—A good way to keep raisins from going to the bottom of a cake is to roll them in butter before placing them in the batter.

Keeping Sliced Bananas.—You can keep ripe bananas from turning dark after slicing if you cover them with any fruit juice or sprinkle them with lemon juice.

Prevents Smoke.—To avoid smoke when making griddle cakes, use a salt bag instead of fat to prevent them from sticking. Merely fill a small, clean cloth bag with salt and rub it over the hot griddle each time fresh batter is put on.

Icing Will Not Run.—If you will dust your cakes with cornstarch before icing, the icing will not tend to run.

Grind Cheese.—When using cheese for macaroni, potatoes, etc., do not grate it. Put it through the fine cutter of your meat chopper and you will not have any small pieces left over.

Save Pickling Sirup.—Sirup left from pickled or spiced fruits makes a delicious flavoring for roast meats.

Odors Eliminated.—Left-over vegetables having a strong smell, such as cabbage, onions, cauliflower, etc., should be put into a glass jar and the top screwed on tightly before placing in the refrigerator. Otherwise the whole ice box will take up the unpleasant odor.

Many Chemical Elements Now Used in Mills; Gold, Silver, Platinum Important

A least 57 of the 92 chemical elements found in and above the earth, or three-fifths of the total, may be found in steel mills, says the American Iron and Steel Institute. Even gold, silver and platinum have their uses, while some of the rarer gases may also be present, although unintentionally.

Plain carbon steel, the most common product of the industry, may contain sixteen elements other than iron, although it is commonly described by its percentage content of carbon, manganese, phosphorus, sulphur and silicon. However, on careful analysis it will probably be found to contain also traces of oxygen, copper, nickel, arsenic, tin, cobalt, nitrogen, chromium, molybdenum, aluminum and antimony.

In the case of carbon steel, this latter group of elements is not consciously introduced by the manufacturer and the amount of each is so small that little effect is produced on the steel's physical properties. Many elements, however, are intentionally added in specified amounts to produce steels of superior physical properties. Among such elements are chromium, cobalt, columbium, copper, manganese, molybdenum, nickel, silicon, titanium, tungsten, uranium, vanadium and zirconium.

Some of the elements unintentionally present in steel are introduced because they are present in iron ore, which often contains, in addition to iron and oxygen, minute quantities of aluminum, arsenic, calcium, copper, hydrogen, magnesium, manganese, phosphorus, potassium, sodium, sulphur and tin.

Air contains, besides oxygen and nitrogen, minute quantities of the gases argon, krypton, neon, and xenon. Thus these elements enter into steel-making as great quantities of air are blown into blast furnaces. As much as 440,000 cubic feet of air, weighing nearly four tons, are used for every ton of pig iron produced.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses

FOOD PRESERVATION and Explains How to Protect Your Family Against the DANGERS of TAINTED FOOD

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York.

A DISTINGUISHED nutritional scientist once remarked that it is a small favor to keep people alive on a poorly chosen diet. For with the wrong food, they may not get one-fifth of their potential efficiency into their lives; they will drag themselves through miserable days, never knowing the joys of physical fitness nor enjoying the abundant health that comes from a perfect balance of nutriment.

The Perfect Diet May Not Be Safe to Eat

But even the homemaker who plans an ideal diet may be undermining the health of her family by feeding them spoiled or tainted food which carries the deadly germs of disease.

We frequently hear stories of death or serious illness caused by food contamination. And it is significant that the improper care of food in the home is most often responsible. One physician has gone so far as to state that there is no estimating the number of persons who, while not sick in bed, feel "rather poorly," "not strong," or "kind of run down" because improperly preserved food gives them insufficient nourishment and their strength is exhausted in combatting the action of germs.

Homemaker's Responsibility For Food Sanitation

An enormous amount of time and money is expended to put foodstuffs in your kitchen in a fresh, palatable and safe form. Laws govern the manufacture, transportation and merchandising of every food product and an elaborate system is maintained for the inspection of meat. But all this care can be undone if food is not adequately refrigerated in the home.

From the moment that meats, fruits, vegetables and groceries reach your kitchen, the responsibility is yours, and you will be guilty if your husband and children suffer ill effects from eating tainted food.

Causes of Food Spoilage

Spoilage in food is due to the ravages of a vast army of micro-organisms which cause it to sour, decay or putrefy, depending upon the nature of the food.

There are three classes of micro-organisms which develop in food—bacteria, molds and yeasts. All three are notable for their minute size, rapid growth and wide distribution. Yeasts and bacteria can only be seen with the aid of a microscope.

Not all micro-organisms are the enemies of man; some are useful in the preparation of foods such as cheese, sauerkraut and bread. These need not concern the homemaker. But the harmful bacteria will flourish wherever conditions are favorable to their growth.

There are two important factors governing food preservation. One is the maintenance of a constant temperature of from 40 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit—under no circumstances should food be stored at a temperature higher than 50 degrees, or bacteria will multiply so rapidly as to make it unsafe to eat. The other is to maintain the proper degree of moisture in the air—neither too much, which encourages the growth of micro-organisms, nor too little, which dehydrates fruits and vegetables.

Appearance of Food May Be Deceptive

The great danger of food that is improperly stored is that it may become spoiled without advertising that fact. Appearance is seldom a reliable guide and unless your refrigerator is efficient, food may become unfit for consumption before spoilage can be noted by sight, taste or smell.

All types of protein foods harbor bacteria which multiply rapidly at temperatures higher than 50 degrees. Under favorable conditions of moisture and temperature, bacteria double their number every 20 to 30 minutes, and a single bacterium can produce a million bacteria in 15 hours.

Safeguard Children's Milk

Milk is the most perishable of all foods, because it is an ideal medium for bacterial growth. If this master food is to be kept safe for children, it must be stored at a temperature not higher than 45 degrees.

Careful studies show that there is very little increase in bacteria when milk is held for as long as 48 hours at a temperature of 40 degrees. But when the temperature was allowed to rise to 50 degrees, almost 30 times as many bacteria developed, and at 60 degrees, the bacteria multiplied more than 8,000 times in the same period.

Foods That Spoil Easily

The rapid multiplication of bacteria also occurs in other foods having a high protein content, including meat, meat broths, fish, gelatin, custards, creamed foods, peas and beans. It is important that all these foods, as well as milk, be kept in the coldest part of the refrigerator, as a few degrees in temperature make a great deal of difference in preventing spoilage.

Once food has begun to deteriorate, it must be discarded or it may endanger health. Cooking will not make spoiled foods fit for consumption.

How to Prevent Mold

Molds are another form of spoilage that the homemaker must constantly battle. Mold will grow on almost any substance, but is particularly likely to occur on acid foods, as lemons, oranges, tomatoes and berries; on neutral foods, such as bread and meat; on sweets, notably jellies and preserves, and on salty foods, including ham or bacon.

Molds may develop quickly or slowly, depending upon the temperature and degree of moisture. They thrive under the influence of warmth and moisture and may remain invisible to the naked eye for as long as 36 hours. All molds are white at first, but as they mature they change color, becoming blue, red, or assuming various shades of brown.

To the bacteriologist, these colors have different meanings. To the homemaker, they all tell the same story—that through improper storage food has lost its appetite appeal and palatability.

Mold growths may be destroyed by boiling temperatures. They

Injustice and Children

In the little world in which children have their existence, whose ever brings them up, there is nothing so finely perceived and so finely felt as injustice. It may be only small injustice that the child can be exposed to, but the child is small, and its world is small, and its rocking-horse stands as many hands high, according to scale, as a big-boned Irish hunter.—Charles Dickens.

Were you ever alone in a strange city?

If you were you know the true value of this newspaper

Alone in a strange city. It is pretty dull. Even the newspapers don't seem to print many of the things that interest you. Headline stories are all right, but there is something lacking. That something is local news.

For—all good newspapers are edited especially for their local readers. News of your friends and neighbors is needed along with that of far off places. That is why a newspaper in a strange city is so uninteresting. And that is why this newspaper is so important to you.

NOW is a good time to get to...

Have You a Question? Ask C. Houston Goudiss

C. Houston Goudiss has put at the disposal of readers of this newspaper all the facilities of his famous Experimental Kitchen Laboratory in New York City. He will gladly answer questions concerning foods, diet, nutrition, and their relation to health. You are also invited to consult him in matters of personal hygiene. may be retarded by keeping food in the cold, dry circulating air provided by an efficient refrigerator.

A good refrigerator is the best investment a family can make. It enables you to take advantage of bargain prices to buy food in quantity. And it safeguards health by preventing contaminated food from finding its way to your table.

An efficient refrigerator also preserves the flavor and texture of meats, fruits and vegetables, so that you enjoy these foods at their best. But its greatest contribution to human welfare is the preservation of food so that it will nourish your body instead of poisoning it.

Questions Answered

E. W.—It's a fallacy to assume that brown sugar is "more nutritious and healthful" than granulated sugar. It is true that brown sugar contains traces of mineral elements, while white sugar contains practically none. But the amounts are variable and never significant. Regardless of color, sugars make their sole contribution to the diet through their carbohydrate content. The caloric value of white sugar is a trifle higher than that of brown, the difference amounting to 91 calories per pound.

Mr. B. M. G.—Yes, cooking vegetables leads to a reduction of their energy values, as well as mineral salts. In general, there is a reduction of from one-third to one-half of the carbohydrate after cooking in water. Frequent reheating cannot be recommended as thrice-boiled vegetables contain little available carbohydrate, and the greater part of their minerals and flavor is also lost.

Mrs. S. T.—When thoroughly chewed and given a proper place in the diet, cheese is usually well digested. Experiments performed by the United States Department of Agriculture demonstrated that an average of 95 per cent of the protein and over 95 per cent of the fat of cheese were digested and absorbed.

Lesson for May 8

CO-OPERATING IN SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:30-41.
GOLDEN TEXT—For he that is not against us is on our part.—Mark 9:40.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When We Want to Be First.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Not in Our Class.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Working with Others for Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Co-operating in Service.

That there is strength in united and co-operative effort is a truth so obvious that in the affairs of the home and of the office we would not attempt to make progress with "a house divided against itself." But with strange and destructive inconsistency some who are engaged in the propagation of the Christian faith, and often the very folk who speak much of love and fellowship and sacrificial service, fight one another with cunning and often bitterness of spirit, and all in the name of Christ whom they profess to serve.

No one who is awake to the real issue involved would ask any true believer to co-operate in Christian work with those who, while holding the name and outward symbols of the followers of Christ, deny His deity and His Word. But surely there is need for loving co-operation between all those who truly love the Lord, who believe in Him and in His Word.

I. A Dispute by the Way (vv. 30-34).

Jesus had taken His disciples from the Mount of Transfiguration by secluded roads through Galilee so that He might instruct them in the all-important truths regarding His death and resurrection. One could hardly conceive of a more propitious arrangement for their growth both in knowledge and grace. Did they profit by it? No; they not only did not understand what He told them but they used their time to dispute "among themselves who should be the greatest" (v. 34).

Possibly James, Peter, and John were a bit puffed up by their experience on the Mount, or perhaps the others were jealous because Jesus had taken them with Him. Or perchance it was just another unprovoked expression of the sinful pride that is so close to the surface of the human heart and mind.

II. An Example of Humility (vv. 35-37).

"True greatness . . . consists not in attaining the first place in the notice and praise of the world, not in being served by many, but in being willing to stoop down to a humble place, not for the sake of self-effacement, not in timid diffidence, but in order to serve others for the sake of Christ" (Erdman).

Note carefully that it is the receiving of a little one in the name of Christ that brings to us the glory of His presence with us. Every deed of kindness and love is commendable and has its own reward, but there is a vast difference between it and humble service in the name and for the glory of Christ.

III. A Lesson in Co-operation (vv. 38-41).

John, quick to apprehend spiritual truth, sees in the teaching of Christ concerning the little child the condemnation of something he had done. "If indeed it be true that to receive a child, an ordinary everyday child, is to receive Christ, and to receive God," said John within himself, "what did I do when I forbade that man who in the Name was casting out a demon? Verily, the light had broken in upon him."

The man who casts out demons, or who gives the disciple of Jesus a cup of water, in His name—that is with true faith in Christ, and in His power, and for His glory—must be a believer. He may not belong to our group or circle, he may not speak our language, he may not use our methods, but if he is serving Christ we should not forbid him or speak evil of him. God has at times called a man to witness for Him, who has done so in a manner distasteful to others, and these in turn have aligned themselves against him and hindered his full usefulness in the gospel. One of the great evangelists of the last generation used methods which shocked many church folk. They stood against him, and yet that man was used to win hosts of business and professional men that the church had scarcely touched, into earnest Christian testimony and service which continues to this day. You and I may not like one another's appearance, or voice, or methods, but let us love and co-operate with one another for Christ's sake!

Slacks With Bolero and Topper.

The slacks fit so nicely about the hips, and have the proper width in the trousers. They and the bolero both tailor quickly and easily in denim, gingham, seersucker or jersey. Use a brilliant handkerchief print for the topper—any sturdy cotton. Here's a holiday outfit you'll thoroughly enjoy.

The Adorable Dirndl.

Nothing is more popular, because nothing is more becoming to slim young figures. It's such a gay, easy-to-wear fashion, and the square neckline is flattering. For a dirndl, choose something in a lively print—linen, chintz and percale are best. Be sure the colors are as complimentary to your skin as that fitted, shirred waistline is to your figure!
